INDIANAPOLIS, May 4, 2021 – Eli Lilly and Company (NYSE: LLY) will outline its newly updated Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) strategy, highlighting its commitments in key areas during the company’s Sustainability Webcast today at 10:30 am ET. In addition, Lilly has launched a new comprehensive resource to provide transparency around the company’s ESG goals and progress at esg.lilly.com.

“As Lilly celebrates its 145th anniversary in a moment when we’ve all been challenged in unimaginable ways, we are reflecting on our long history of developing life-changing medicines for patients and making meaningful contributions to our world. Sustainability, which flows directly from our purpose and core values, is integral to everything we do at Lilly and we are keenly aware that how we work is just as important as what we do,” said David A. Ricks, Lilly Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. “While this focus is not new, we are redoubling our efforts—increasing our investment in sustainability, setting new goals and communicating our progress in new ways to all of our stakeholders who want to learn more.”

Lilly’s focus areas for ESG include access and affordability, diversity and inclusion, community engagement, employee well-being, human rights, patient safety, climate, waste, water, product stewardship, corporate governance, business ethics and supply chain management. Lilly is also adopting standard ESG reporting frameworks from the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board and the Taskforce on Climate-Related Financial Disclosures. Highlights of Lilly's ESG commitments include:
